

Did you hear Buffet?

" There is No Housing Bubble "

(Reported by DS news: From a 'fortune' report)

The real estate market in it's nature is a local market and there is no one us national market. Each real estate market is different, never the less, Warren Buffet, the authority in the world of investment has declared 'there is no housing bubble in the US market'. We do not see the terms that caused the last housing bubble in the US in the current market.

As home prices continue to surge upward, many in the industry are beginning to wonder if a housing bubble is imminent, or worse, if yet another financial crisis is in the making.

Warren Buffet, Chairman and CEO of Berkshire Hathaway, a multi-national conglomerate holding company, believes that the chances of home prices collapsing are very low, according to a recent report from Fortune by Stephen Gandel.

Although now may be a good time to buy a house, it is not as good a time as it was four years ago, Buffett stated at the Berkshire Hathaway annual shareholders meeting in Omaha, Nebraska. Fortune reported that Buffett thinks the chances of housing prices collapsing are very low.

Want to read more? Press here for the full article